

The New Zealand Army

The origins of the New Zealand Army date back to 1845 when the militia was first called out to assist in the operations during the First Maori War. A permanent force was established in 1867 with the formation of the Armed Constabulary.

New Zealand forces have served in all the major world conflicts since the South African War in 1899, through the First and Second World Wars, Korea, Vietnam and on to numerous peace-keeping duties in the Middle East, Bosnia and the Pacific.
